- The just awarded Robert Parker score of 96 on Il Poggione Brunello di Montalcino 2013 creates a significant investment opportunity.
- Il Poggione Brunello di Montalcino 2010 (RP97) has already made collectors a lot of money (340%), and we expect the 2013 to do the same.
- Merchants are still pricing the 2013 based on the old James Suckling score of 92, creating a short-term buying opportunity.

Il Poggione: One of Brunello's Premier Estates

Il Poggione is one of Brunello di Montalcino's most famous estates. Robert Parker has noted the "impeccable reputation" garnered by the winery in recent years. The estate traces its history in the heart of the internationally-famed Brunello di Montalcino region back to the late c19th. The estate is owned and run by the father and son combination of Fabrizio and Alessandro Bindocci. They use very traditional methods to produce a 100% Sangiovese wine which is capable of extensive aging. This aging potential is what gives the wine its investment potential. We have found that collectors in Asia have become increasingly familiar with – and enthusiastic about – Il Poggione over the past five years which has driven the price appreciation of back vintages like the 2010.

Il Poggione Brunello di Montalcino 2010 shows the Potential of the 2013

Three years ago, the Il Poggione Brunello di Montalcino 2010 had a market price of SG$205 / 6. Today, the lowest offered price for this wine in Singapore is SG$900. This rise of 340% in less than three years is testament to the improving reputation of the estate, but also to the fact that the estate is not overly aggressive with its release prices and allows collectors to accumulate investment gains (in the way our older readers will remember that Bordeaux producers once did!).

Around 200,000 bottles of Il Poggione Brunello di Montalcino are produced each vintage. They are released at a modest price and trade with good liquidity for about one year. Supply disappears and prices increase sharply:

Il Poggione Brunello di Montalcino 2013 is VERY Undervalued based on new Parker Score

The new 96 Robert Parker score (released this week) means that Il Poggione Brunello di Montalcino 2013 is very undervalued versus previous investment grade vintages:

Year	RP Score	Price	Price per Point	Drink to
2013	96	SGD 270	SGD 0.47	2035
2010	97	SGD 900	SGD 1.55	2035
2007	95	SOLD OUT	N/A	2047
2006	94	SOLD OUT	N/A	2036
2004	95	SOLD OUT	N/A	2030
2001	93	SOLD OUT	N/A	2023

A price per point of only SG$0.47 makes little sense versus the SG$1.55 per point collectors now pay for the 2010 wine, which only scores one point more (97 versus 96). The 2013 was released in August 2017, and in a few months will have been trading for one year. Based on the trading pattern of the 2010, we would expect supply to start to dry up in the next 3-6 months and this wine to start appreciating in price. We target HK$475 / 6 in 24 months, for a price return of 77% based on the current pricing of the 2010 and other investment grade vintages.
